

Preliminary Report on preoccupations concerning the effects of human health of electromagnetic fields

For many years now independent scientists and Non-Governmental Organisations have been tirelessly warning national and international health authorities of the damaging effects of ever-growing artificial radiation on people and on wildlife, particularly from the ElectroMagnetic Fields (EMF) generated by the HyperFrequency microwaves from wireless telecommunications.

For many years now no government or national body has even deigned to convene a parliamentary commission in spite of the urgency of the situation caused by this grave problem of public and environmental health.

For many years now the equivocation on this issue has been cleverly maintained by various institutions, including the WHO, their strings pulled by the industry via the corrupt M. Repacholi (ex-WHO and ICNIRP), as can be seen from the successive leaders of the international organisation who have never taken the decisions that were needed.

Today we are paying for the error of our ways and are discovering the scale of the disaster, especially for young people.

The negationists of several countries have managed to make the doubt and confusion persist by putting out disinformation, however now the links of cause and effect are clearly and scientifically established.

The verdict is damning on the gene damage caused by artificial EMFs among some people whose metabolism is affected by new pathologies such as Electro-Hyper Sensitivity (EHS) or a disturbance of endocrine functions called The Microwave Syndrome.

An accurate study of the contributing factors and the high mortality among people whose health is already weakened is yet to be carried out (clusters).

Prompted by this recent evidence action is being taken: the fact that the population is being massively bombarded by artificial radiation has at last been recognised, and will be the subject of a wide-ranging and responsible debate in the European Parliament based on this Proposed Resolution dated 19 December 2008.

This document represents a great leap forward. Please distribute it as widely as possible to local authorities and councils, teachers, health personnel, etc.

Next-up organisation.
